Introduction

1. President's Committee on Employment of People with Disabilities, 2000. Cited in final report of the Mayoral Taskforce on People with Disabilities, Chicago, Illinois, disabilityworks. Eight million individuals with severe disabilities currently receive Supplemental Security Income or Social Security Disability Income, costing the federal government $72 billion annually. With Medicaid and Medicare expenditures factored in, the price tag exceeds $110 billion a year. And the price becomes a truly astounding figure of $300 billion a year when other direct (such as housing supports, welfare, and workers' compensation) and indirect (such as lost taxes and productivity) costs of unemployment are factored in.
